Greetings!

I write this note with the enthusiastic sounds of new students ringing in my ears. Today they have come—307 new students of whom about 260 are members of the Class of 1962. Their faces reflect their eagerness and their records bespeak for them an exciting college career. You would be thrilled to see them as I am thrilled now.

Last night the faculty, with their wives and husbands, met for dinner at Eagles Mere. This was the “Kick-off” for the new year. It was a delightful evening. I had the privilege to present sixteen new members of the faculty and staff. These people will be introduced to you in the pages that follow. How important it is to build a strong and competent faculty! You would be proud to know the faculty at Lycoming College today.

The Student Activities Building is now under roof. Some days the progress seems so slow, but it is only because we are so anxious to move into its facilities. The present schedule calls for completion on February 15, 1959. You will be amazed, I am sure, when you see this fine new building complete.

The task of the college has never been more demanding than it is today. Honestly, we are so excited about our job that I can only hope that the contagion of our enthusiasm will spread to you. You are party to a developing and growing enterprise. Lycoming College is determined to make itself able for the demands that are being placed upon us in these exciting days.

Very sincerely,

Benjamin Wertz

A CONCERNED COLLEGE

JUST AS THE PULSE of a human body is felt at a furthestmost extremity, the wrist, so the pulse of a college community is ultimately felt in the long arms of space and time along which its alumni have traveled. The obvious and strongest measure of the intellectual and social success of a college is that measure of the life and influence of its graduates. What its graduates do in private and public life will in the end reflect the kind of institution it was from which they were graduated. We, who see the college from the inside, while we reflect the influence of our own colleges, are not usually in a position to judge our influence in this college until long years after a particular class has moved its collective mortarboard tassels from right to left and said its good-byes to empty classrooms and hollow halls. You, who are or tomorrow will be alumni of Lycoming, are therefore the indices by which we must measure what we are doing while another class, another generation, and yet another comes, stays for a few short years and then passes on. As time and change carry you far away, how well you shouldered your responsibilities as public servants, religious personalities, and citizens is how good a college we have been.

With information about you as a part of our armamentarium, we find ourselves much better fitted to shape our course for those years immediately and ultimately ahead. We, therefore, crave your patience in filling out our questionnaires, in answering our mail, and reporting to us whenever the spirit moves you, those things of value which we did or did not provide you while you were here. Almost immediately we are faced with a reevaluation; the Middle States Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges in which we have had membership almost since our inception as a four-year degree granting institution, has asked us to reevaluate ourselves in the year 1960. Without doubt, this means that we shall be asking many serious questions of you who have been students during these first twelve significant years of growth as a four-year college.

Asking questions of the past is one major facet of our responsibility to tomorrow. Another is seeking additional positive and creative elements in our own and others' educational thinking and applying these elements as the rudder of our future course. Seeking to make the strongest possible contribution to human destiny, we must, I believe, keep our sights fixed irrevocably upon students as future public servants, thoughtful religious personalities, and citizens of a democratic world.

The Christian College of Liberal Arts must take public service to its heart. Firmly entrenched in the American way of life is the idea of a government by the people. Exceptional has been education's role in the whole matter of public service in which the graduate of a college must take an ever-increasing role. The human society has evolved from a simple collection of widely separated groups of individuals to a large-scale mass of intermingled peoples spanning two mighty oceans and six continents. With this social evolution has also come a concomitant evolution in the business of government. Where, in man's most primitive societies, the authority of any community was usually vested in one person, modern man has developed, in his democratic states, a system in which almost as many people are intimately involved in government as there are people in the state. It is true that in our modern state the people exist to govern as well as to be governed. The vast complexity of a modern government demands the best output of millions of citizens. This demand is, curiously enough, not being met—or is being met with a shocking degree of public apathy. Despite education's exceptional contributions, the public demand for such contributions has far exceeded the supply. Too long have some colleges of liberal arts held aloof from the mundane business of dedicated public service. Too long have some colleges abdicated a responsibility for seeing to it that its graduates know what dedicated public service is. The concerned college breathes a fiery spirit of dedication to the public interest. We want Lycoming to continue as just such a concerned college. This does not mean that we become a training ground for civil service—but what it does mean is that every graduate ought to have a profound understanding of society's needs, and a deep awareness of his own responsibilities to that society which supports him. These qualities of understanding and awareness, successfully inculcated, are manifest in a thousand little ways. Service clubs, school organizations, local political arenas, and volunteer welfare operations are typical examples.

But I hold the firm conviction that the Christian College of Liberal Arts is in a strategic position to add substantially more than any other agency to the public interest. It must do this by its insistence upon a commitment to the Church with which it reciprocates in support. In point of truth, it would follow that the public interest is best served by hearing and following the great mandamus of the prophetic Christian Church. Hence the significant college of tomorrow will deal most strongly with its religious life, bent sharply upon the creation of minds dedicated most firmly to churchmanship. We would pin our hopes for the future of this globe on Him whose name and sign our churches bear. To govern wisely or to work in the public interest depends not only upon an understanding of the public need—it depends also upon the careful application of the principles of morality, the concern for which has been a part of the heritage given us through sacred education, from the time of Increase and Cotton Mather in Harvard's puritan days to the present in the church-related liberal arts colleges and seminaries of 1958.

Post-war public pressures for material welfare increase provide an incisive urge to make the premium of education a demand for better steel, more marketable hogs, greater advertising imagination or faster modes of transport. Material comforts derived therefrom are laudable goals—only fools could deny this—for uppermost in our evangelistic missionary minds is raising the living standards of the poverty-stricken, pitiable peoples of less well-endowed countries in the yellow-brown-black zones of the world's populated areas. But with all our concerns for wretched poverty and our hopes for suffering humanity, we have contrived a sorry condition of spiritual poverty, a state of a-morality or non-morality. Unwittingly and perhaps inadvertently, the continued stress on material gain emanating from an educational process is fortifying us against invasion, by concerns over questions of the spirit.

The Christian College of Liberal Arts is a uniquely fortunate college because it can offer a proving ground for the synthesis of answers to the "great questions" against the backdrop of a religious heritage—the self-same heritage in which this nation and its founding fathers synthesized ideas relating to the dignity and worth of man as they formulated a constitution and subsequently a Bill of Rights. It is this same Christian college which shall, by its insistence upon the synthesis of answers to life's most pressing questions, stem the rising tide of secularism. It shall do this as did the founding fathers of this nation by synthesizing answers within a loosely-organized superstructure of Christian ideology, undergirded by the strongest

Christian presuppositions and always, of course, amendable to criticism from without and, of special value, to criticism from within the college. This is the uniqueness of a Christian Liberal Arts College as it seeks to develop religious personalities—presupposing the love of God, and the dignity and worth of man, the mystery of Christ crucified and the efficacy of God's Holy Spirit.

But the question of citizenship remains. We expect, by requiring a course in American Government, to create in students an awareness of political and social responsibility as citizens of a democratic state. It is not, however, correct to assume that once the obligations of Political Science 201 are discharged, that no further responsibility for or concern over American Government exists. That course, like all others in our curriculum, ought to be regarded as a solid step along an ongoing, upgoing pathway toward higher vistas and higher appreciations of our human relations responsibilities—responsibilities which range far and wide over that vast sea of humanity in every "corner of the globe."

The onus for putting a student's awareness of the larger meanings of citizenship into a world vision must rest with the college of the liberal

Editor's Note: This article is a condensation of the address Dr. David G. Mobberley, Dean of Lycoming College, delivered at the Alumni Banquet on Saturday, June 7, 1958. arts. Because we live in a world, incredibly dwarfed by modern technology, we can no longer regard our responsibilities as citizens as circumscribed by the Atlantic Ocean, Gulf of Mexico, Rio Grande River, Pacific Ocean, the international boundary, the Great Lakes, and the St. Lawrence River. Our strong presuppositions of nationalism must become tempered by a world outlook—not, mind you, because it is sophisticated to be worldly-minded, but more strongly, because we do not live in the world of James Monroe.

Recent experiences in foreign policy have taught us some bitter lessons. The isolationist foreign policy of the early 1800's was adequate for a new nation. Then the United States was kicking the dust of Europe off its boots, a decadent, politically ravaged Europe in the throes of 1200 years of continuous internal struggle for monarchical supremacy. That American revolution, during the days of British Colonial supremacy, foretold the ultimate collapse of all the imperial European dynastic powers—but it foretold more than that. It was the signal for the whole world to face up to the fact that independence and freedom were the destiny of all men. And that all these men were to find a way to live in some kind of harmony . . . with no ethnic group to exercise social or economic dominion over another.

We do not intend to minimize the responsibility of mature American citizenship—far from it. But we do see our role as a great nation preserved only as we extrude beyond the limits of mere tolerance to a profound understanding of the hopes, desires and dreams of the other nine-tenths of the world's peoples.

The concerned college of liberal arts must manifest a world outlook if it is to fit its graduates for positions of leadership in a world that would struggle for international understanding under a United Nations charter not much older than this four-year college. It could be historically significant for Lycoming that its seeds as a four-year college were sown during that same span of years in which a new world order was bravely formulated.

ENROLLMENT PASSES 900

According to the latest figures from the Registrar, Mr. G. Heil Gramley, Lycoming will have 905 students enrolled for the fall semester, including 47 who are part-time. The ratio continues about 3:1 with 654 men and 204 women. Resident students will outnumber non-resident 445 to 413.

Maturity . . .

by DR. PHILIP C. HAMMOND, JR.

THE CHURCH-RELATED COLLEGE occupies a unique place in American education today. Historically, all educational institutions were "Church-related" and attempted to do that task so well described by Charles Wesley—the uniting of "knowledge" with "vital piety." But, in the course of time, other educational institutions arose to supplement the Church-related College, and, in time, too often to surpass it in the specific area of imparting "knowledge," if not "piety."

Within the last few years, however, the Church-related institutions of many denominations have begun to assess themselves—and to accept the challenge of the state, private, or "secular" schools in the field of education. In Methodism, this assessment has been realistic enough to cause the General Conference to lay special emphasis on higher education in the present quadrennium.

Self-evaluation Necessary

Self-evaluation is a prerequisite of maturity, and this article will point to a few signs of maturity which must be present in any institution of learning, and, most specifically, in the Church-related liberal arts college.

The liberal arts institution of any type must, first of all, be socially mature. By nature, such an institution must fit its graduates to meet all of the situations of life in which humans interact. Not only must the traditional "social graces" be inculcated, but "sociological graces" as well. By the latter term is meant knowledge concerning the society of Mankind, as a whole. The inter-relationships of cultures, economics, languages and races must all be a part of the area of recognition of the mature citizen in the present world. This the Church-related college can do as well as any other college, for its sphere of activity is generally in the broad area of general education, as indicated by the term "liberal arts."

Likewise, any educational institution has imposed upon it the second aspect of that term—arts. "Arts" is a generic expression embracing all facets of human intellectual achievement. "Higher" education must be indeed of a quality and caliber today never before demanded of educational institutions in all of Man's upward search for Truth. College-trained men and women must be thoroughly versed in their fields, else they will ultimately fail to make the grade of competition current in modern life. In short, the program of the educational institution in our present age must be of a superior level. But equally necessary to modern education is its scope. Modern education must be both "broad" and "specific. The specialist without a thorough acquaintance with other disciplines is a mechanic without a complete set of tools. Similarly, the intellectual "drifter" must be channeled into a main stream, if he is to progress. The expressions of academic maturity in any institution must consider all of these ends. Standards must be high, curricula must be broad, and special areas of study must be given all possible opportunities. Here again, the Church-related institution has a full share of responsibility—to its student body and faculty, to the society of which it hopes to remain a part, and to the religious group to which it is related.

Religion and Life Are One

There is one area of "maturity," however, in which the Church-related college may function beyond the area of the general school. That is in the area of religion. Since the dawn of Man's comprehension, "religion" has formed a part of his consciousness. In society today, "religion," of one sort or another, is an important segment of everyday living. The earliest educational institutions were designed to teach "religion" as a primary objective. In the course of time, and especially in America, specialized schools have assumed the major part of that task, and the doctrine of the separation of "Church" and "State" has permeated to the roots of democratic educational theory. Expediency and necessity have thus removed this specific aspect of life from general academic thinking. Building "knowledge" and "vital piety" into the foundation of human thinking is no easy task, however. But recognition of the existential nature of that union in contemporary life is inescapable.

Thus in the place of synthetic morality and areligious ethics, the task of the Church-related institution, alone of all other educational institutions, has come to be the making plain of the fact that religion and life are one, and to evidence that conclusion in outlook and expression on the college campus.

Maturity Is Goal

But, as the social outlook and the academic awareness of the Church-related college must be mature—so also must be its religious outlook and expression. This can only be achieved by frankness, by enlightened study, and by sincerity. As "religion" is a part of living outside the ivy walls, so also must it be a vital part of living within them, if it is to be less than hypocrisy—and indeed, "mature."

Maturity is the continual goal of any institution of learning, and triply so the striving of the Church-related college — socially, academically, and religiously.

Editor's Note: Dr. Philip C. Hammond, Jr. was graduated from Drew University receiving his B.A. degree from Brothers College and his B.D. degree from the Drew Theological Seminary. He received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Yale University. Dr. Hammond joined the faculty of Lycoming College in 1957 as an Assistant Professor of Religion. He is also the Director of Religious Activities.

CHAPEL AND VESPER PROGRAM

Some of you alumni may be able to remember the "good old days" when chapel attendance was required. The status remains about quo in that respect at the present time. What has changed is the quality of these chapel programs. The religious program on campus has been augmented with a Sunday afternoon Vesper Series beginning at 4:00 p. m. The Chapel Services commence at 10:10 a. m. Both programs are held in the Clarke Chapel.

The men responsible for obtaining these outstanding speakers are The Reverend Dr. Philip C. Hammond, Jr., Assistant Professor of Religion and Mr. James W. Sheaffer, Assistant Professor of Music. Mr. Sheaffer is the Chairman of the Chapel Committee and Dr. Hammond is the Director of Religious Activities.

HOMECOMING 1958–October 17th and 18th

SOME ALUMNI MAY think of Homecoming only in terms of a football game. Lycoming's 1958 Homecoming will include a football game with the Juniata Indians, which may well be the toughest opponent on the Warriors' schedule this fall. Homecoming weekend starts much earlier than the football game at 1:30 p. m. however.

The first event to take place this weekend in which some alumni will be interested is the annual Lettermen's Banquet Friday evening at 6:30 p. m. at the Crestwood Hotel. Athletic Director, Dave Buscy, is making special plans for this banquet which includes inviting, as guests, the members of the first football team of Lycoming College. That was the team which played in the fall of 1948 so that this will also be a tenth reunion banquet for them. Later, on Friday evening, will be the President's reception in Rich Hall. Alumni returning for the weekend will have an opportunity to greet the President, the Dean of the College, and meet new faculty members and students.

All home football games will be played at Bowman Field. Day games will start at 1:30 p. m.; night games with Albright and Wilkes will start at 7:45 p. m. Tickets for any home game are $1.25 and can be secured by writing to the Alumni Office.

Immediately after the game the Williamsport Alumni Club is planning to hold a cider and doughnut party. This will be the ideal spot to meet old friends and classmates if you don't see them earlier. This will be an informal hour and will last from the end of the game until approximately 5:00 p. m.

Last, but not least, is the annual Homecoming Banquet and Dance. Because the heavy enrollment resulted in crowded eating conditions in the College Dining Room, the Alumni Banquet has been moved to the Gymnasium. This will still keep the activities of the weekend on campus and give us more elbow room. A catering service has been arranged so that a fine banquet is assured. Gordon Ade '22, owner of the Village Tea Room, is the caterer. In addition to the meal itself, Gordon has promised us unlimited quantities of sticky buns, cinnamon rolls and coffee. The cost of this meal, including tip, will be $2.50 per person.

The most recent picture of the Student Activities Building reflects considerable progress since the August Newsletter was published. The roof on the south wing has been completed while the structural steel for the roof of the north wing is almost complete. It is expected that the entire building be under roof by Homecoming weekend and will eliminate any further delays due to inclement weather.

During the summer the student parking lot was paved with amiesite and spaces marked for 130 cars. This lot is directly south of the John W. Long Library, a portion of which is seen on the right. On the left is Rich Hall and in the center background, the Student Activities Building wrapped in scaffolding.

Fill out the attached coupon and send it to the Alumni Office immediately if you wish to be sure of a reservation for either the banquet or the dance. Reservations cannot be guaranteed if they are received after October 15.

Complications have arisen concerning the location of the Homecoming Dance. These problems have been solved and it can now be definitely stated that the Homecoming Dance will be held at the Curtin Junior High School located at the corner of Packer and Eldred Streets. Dance tickets are $2.00 per couple and can be obtained through your Alumni Office.

It should be noted that this will probably be the last year that the Homecoming Dance and/or Banquet will be held off campus. In all probability these functions will take place in the new Student Activities Building which is pictured here. While you are on campus this weekend, take time to visit the new buildings and observe the improvements which have been made since you were a student here. Much of the credit for these changes is due to the support you gave the Development Campaign this spring.

FOOTBALL

Burt Richardson '61, hard-running freshman fullback last year is ready for another season at the same post. Ann Harper '60, attractive cheerleader, will be helping to spur Burt and the Warriors to football victories.

THE LYCOMING WARRIORS will build their 1958 squad around 16 returning Lettermen. The squad left for training camp on Sunday, August 31, for two-a-day practices. This 10-day period was spent at Camp Kline along Pine Creek. They returned in time for freshman orientation on September 9.

Returning Lettermen

Lettermen who will form the forward wall are ends John Cox, Huntingdon, and Jim Miller, Yeagertown; tackles Don Federoll, Long Island, and Leroy Thompson, Williamsport; guards Frank Agnello and Ed Receski, Indiana, Pa., and Norm McGraw, Middletown; centers Bob Del-Bono, New York City, and Mike Soroka, Auburn, N. Y.

The backfield lettermen are quarterbacks Tip Agnello, Indiana, and Paul Motta, Pottsville; halfbacks Walt Boyer, Williamsport; John Grier, Harrisburg; Burt Richardson, Auburn, N. Y., and Bill Smith, Hazleton; and fullback John Joe, Coatesville.

OUTLOOK FOR 1958 at Lycoming

Busey's Record Improves

Head football coach, Dave Busey, is starting his fifth year at Lycoming. He has had the pleasure of seeing his football teams grow from infancy (football returned to the campus after a four year lapse) to full stature. In 1954 the Lyco football record was 0-6-0. The following year it was 2-4-1. In 1956 they went over the .500 mark with a 5-3-0 record. Last year, the best season under Busey, the record was 5-1-1 with one game being cancelled due to the virus outbreak. Busey feels that the 1958 Warriors are as strong as last year and more experienced.

The biggest job for Busey and his staff of assistants that includes Hank Green, Rollie Myers and Budd Whitehill, will be to find replacements for departed stars such as ends Ken Polcyn and Dick Kaluza, tackle Dave Himes, and halfbacks Rich Reimold and Wayne Bohn. Polcyn was named on numerous All-State teams last year and received the outstanding player award in the Pretzel Bowl at Reading, Penna.

Schedule Lists New Opponents

A tough eight-game schedule is in store for the '58 Warriors. Included in this schedule are such new opponents as the University of Bridgeport, St. Lawrence University and Western Maryland College. All three of these teams will be encountered away from home this year.

For the first time Lycoming is competing in the college division of the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference. The Warriors are enrolled in the Northern Division. Their conference games are against Albright, Juniata, Wilkes, Pennsylvania Military and Western Maryland.

Homecoming October 18

The Homecoming contest on October 18 will find the Warriors entertaining the unbeaten Juniata Indians. Juniata's last loss occurred on College Field in 1956 when the Warriors scalped them 13-6 in another Homecoming meeting. At that time Juniata had rolled up 25 consecutive victories. Dad's Day will be observed on November 15, when the Warriors meet Geneva. All home games will be played on Bowman Field and will begin at 1:30 p. m. or 7:45 p. m.

Memos From the Editor's Desk

Pictured above is Carol Ann Lady, born August 3, 1958, under a bib that almost makes a blanket for her at this age. Nine other bibs and congratulatory letters have been mailed since the action was taken by the Alumni Association.

BIBS FOR BABIES

YOUR ALUMNI ASSOCIATION held a summer meeting on July 13, at the Slate Estate cabin just outside Antes Fort. One of the items of business discussed that afternoon was the "New Baby" plan.

In addition to carrying a news item under the "From Here and There" section on class notes, the Association felt something more should be done when the Alumni Office is informed of the arrival of a baby in the home of one of our alumni. Henceforth, when a birth announcement is received at the College, a letter of congratulations is written by the Alumni Secretary, Andy Lady. Included with this letter is a practical gift presented on behalf of the Alumni Association. This functional gift is a bib inscribed: "LYCOMING COLLEGE 19??"

It was further suggested that a picture of a bib on a baby be included in the next issue of the Alumni Bulletin. There was the touchy problem of whose baby to photograph. Eva L. Keller '13, pointed out that we could resolve this situation by letting the next birth announcement received in the Alumni Office be the deciding factor. By a strange coincidence that almost implies collusion, the next birth announcement came from Mr. and Mrs. R. Andrew Lady '49. Mrs. Lady is the former Nancy Hancy Ex'51.

COLLEGE OF THE AIR

WGAL-TV, Lancaster, Pennsylvania, will again sponsor the College of the Air program as a public service for an estimated audience of 60,000 persons in the Central Pennsylvania area. The program is scheduled to start on Monday, October 6, 1958, and extend through Friday, January 16, 1959.

Class time for College of the Air is from 9:00 to 9:30 a. m., Monday through Friday. Participating colleges this year are: Lycoming College, Shippensburg State Teachers College, Elizabethtown College, Gettysburg College, Millersville State Teachers College, Franklin and Marshall College, Wilson College, and Lebanon College.

Lycoming College's fall semester program is entitled, "What's New Today." On each program a panel will discuss a contemporary problem, a current trend or a pertinent contribution relevant to contemporary society, noting its historical antecedents, its significance and ramifications in the community and in the world today. To keep the topics timely, program selections cannot be announced more than a few weeks in advance. However, information about individual programs may be secured by writing to the Assistant to the President at Lycoming College. Suggestions from viewers for topics they might like discussed will also be welcomed for consideration.

The dates for Lycoming's programs are: October 6, October 20, November 3, November 17, December 1, December 15, 1958, and January 5, 1959.

THE FOUNDATION FOR INDEPENDEN

1957-1958 ANNUAL REPORT

Forty-four Pennsylvania colleges and universities shared in this cooperative program for corporate aid to independent higher education. Lycoming is one of the participating colleges. As in each preceding year, there has been substantial growth in support of this program. Total receipts for the last year were $426,949.01 from 411 contributions, an increase of 23% in amount and 25% in number of gifts.

During the annual calling period last November, the presidents of the member colleges and an equal number of administrative officers devoted an aggregate of 553 days to the presentation of this program to business and industry throughout the state. Such a record of endeavor leaves no doubt as to the seriousness of purpose and the importance which is attached to this program by our Pennsylvania educators.

Additions to Faculty and Staff

AS THE FALL SEMESTER for the 1958-1959 academic year got underway, returning students found a number of faculty members had been added during the summer. Some of the new faculty members were employed in anticipation of a record enrollment which may exceed 875 students.

The addition of Russian in the Language Department will be of special interest to alumni. Robert Morris '55, will serve as a part-time instructor teaching this class in the late afternoon on Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday. This schedule will permit college students as well as Williamsport residents to enroll in this course. According to the President of Grinnell College, Howard R. Bowen, "only 4,000 Americans are currently studying Russian, in less than 200 colleges and only a handful of high schools, despite great demand for translators and other experts in the language. By contrast, English is being taught to at least five million Russians."

The position of Head Resident was created this year and will be filled by Mrs. Sue L. New. Mrs. New will have her residence in Rich Hall. One of Lycoming's most active alumni returns to her alma mater as a part-time instructor. Eva L. Keller '13, will teach some evening classes in the field of art education. All of the appointments are effective September 1, Dr. D. Frederick Wertz announced.

PROFESSOR

Mr. Mark M. Heald was appointed Visiting Professor of History for a year beginning with the fall semester. An educator, author and lecturer, Mr. Heald has been a member of the faculties of Columbia, Princeton, Rutgers, and Fisk Universities. He was a history professor at Rutgers for 30 years from 1926 until his retirement in 1955. In his first year at Rutgers he had a young man in his class by the name of Loring B. Priest. Dr. Priest came to Lycoming in 1949 and is now head of the History Department and Director of the Social Sciences Division.

Mr. Heald received his A.B. degree from Oberlin College and his A.M. degree from Columbia University. Foreign study includes research at the British Museum, the British Royal Colonial Institute, British Public Records Office, London, England; and at the University of Montpellier, France.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSORS

Dr. John A. Stuart was appointed Associate Professor of English. Dr. Stuart brings a wealth of teaching experience to Lycoming having taught English and American Literature at Lawrence College, the University of Arizona, Whittier College, California State Polytechnic College and Iowa State Teachers College. He was with the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. in New York City, as editor of the Bonbright Survey of Electric Light and Power Companies, from 1929 to 1933.

Dr. Stuart did his undergraduate work at William Jewell College. He received his M.A. degree and his Ph.D. degree from Northwestern University. While at Northwestern he served as University Tutor, Teaching Fellow and Instructor in English.

Dr. C. Courson Zeliff was appointed Associate Professor of Biology. For the last 22 years Dr. Zeliff has been on the faculty at The Pennsylvania State University during which time he taught Zoology. Prior to that time he had taught at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Davidson College, Toledo University, and the University of Detroit. After being graduated from Bloomsburg State Teachers College, Dr. Zeliff went to Lafayette where he received his A.B. degree in Biology. He received his M.S. degree in Botany from the University of Pennsylvania. Cornell University conferred the Ph.D. degree in Zoology on Dr. Zeliff.

ASSISTANT PROFESSORS

Mrs. Anna Skabo Erichsen was appointed Cataloguing Librarian with the rank of Assistant Professor. Although born in this country, Mrs. Erichsen obtained much of her formal education in Norway and Germany. Her professional career has taken her to India for the Department of State as director of the U. S. Information Service Libraries of India and Nepal. A member of the staff of the New York Public Library for a period of 23 years, Mrs. Erichsen was professional adviser to the chief executive of the cataloguing division at the time she left for India. She also has some experience as a college librarian. Her first position was chief cataloger at the University of North Dakota. She later became assistant librarian at Carleton College and more recently was librarian at Wells College. Mrs. Erichsen holds the B.L.S. degree from New York University.

Dr. Werner J. Fries was appointed Assistant Professor of German. Born in Hamburg, Germany, Dr. Fries came to this country just before the second World War to study Music at the University of Pennsylvania and with William Kincaid of the Philadelphia Orchestra. After serving in the Armed Forces as an interpreter and liaison man, he continued his studies at the Peabody Conservatory of Music and Johns Hopkins University with a music major. He received his M.A. degree and his Ph.D. degree from the same institution in the field of German.

Dr. Mamoru Iga was appointed Assistant Professor of Sociology. Dr. Iga, a native of Japan, received his B.A. degree from the Kwansei Gakuin University in that country. He came to the United States for his graduate work and received his M.A. degree from Brigham Young University. The Ph.D. degree was conferred upon him by the University of Utah. Since that time Dr. Iga has taken some post-doctoral work at Harvard University. During the summer of 1958 Dr. Iga conducted the program of Asian studies at Syracuse University.

INSTRUCTORS

Mr. Norman R. Ford was appointed Instructor in Mathematics. In addition to his teaching duties, Mr. Ford has considerable experience in the theater and will undertake the guidance and direction of play production at Lycoming. He is the author of a book, The Psychology of Rehearsal. Mr. Ford received his B.S. degree in Engineering from the United States Military Academy.

Mr. Kenneth Josephson was appointed Instructor in Music. Mr. Josephson studied at Connecticut Wesleyan for two years and then transferred to Columbia University receiving his bachelor of science degree in music theory. Graduate work has taken him to Smith College and the University of Hartford. He later received the M.A. degree in Composition and Cello from the Eastman School of Music at the University of Rochester.

Mrs. Gertrude B. Madden was appointed Instructor in English. Mrs. Madden has a background of public relations and radio experience. For many years she had her own program over a local radio station. Mrs. Madden received her A.B. degree from the University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Joseph L. Mapes was appointed Reference Librarian with the rank of Instructor. During the past summer he did graduate work at the University of Minnesota. He received his A.B. degree from Cornell College, Mt. Vernon, Iowa.

LECTURER

Mr. James G. Morgan was appointed Lecturer in Education. He spent a total of 36 years at Mansfield State Teachers College, the last 14 of which he served as President. He received his Ph.B. degree from Muhlenberg College and his M.A. degree from the University of Michigan.

Dan Gallagher sent a most interesting letter to the editor explaining some of the work accomplished by his company from which we quote: "My present position is the New York Division Sales Manager of Lehigh Chemical Company. The company holds the distinction of being the first major producer of synthetic jet aircraft, guided missile, and rocket lubricants. As a matter of fact, L. C. C. has supplied, and is the only supplier of, lubricants for the presently orbiting earth satellites. It has been stated that much of the United Nations' success in the Korean 'Mig Alley' campaign has been attributed to the use of our lubricants as the aircraft of the U. N. has our lubricants in their machine guns. This afforded a real advantage over the moisture frozen 'MIG' guns. Being synthetic, these lubricants are precision engineered in our laboratory and have no petroleum products in them." Dan's address is: 9 Beacon Hill Road, Port Washington, Long Island, N. Y.

One morning, shortly after your editor came to work, the telephone rang. It was a long distance phone call from Shiprock, New Mexico. The caller, Stanley Rosenberg, remarked that it was only 5:30 a. m. at the trading post. Stan accepted the position of Community Worker with the USPHS in June of 1956, when he and his wife, Dorothy Cohick '49, moved to Shiprock. Dot is presently working as librarian for the largest boarding school in this country. There are more than 1,000 students from pre-school through the sixth grade.

Stan included a snapshot with his letter which showed him entering a typical Navajo hogan. His area covers 5,000 square miles in which more than 23,000 Navajos are living. They range in educational level from non-English speaking to college graduates. Stan's job is to make the Navajos aware of prevention of illness through interpreters, films, displays, and the organization of committees. Infant feeding and immunization are some of the more difficult areas to get across to the Indians. The most pressing medical problems are upper respiratory illness, tuberculosis and infant diarrheas. Stan and his aides have been stressing the value of frequent handwashing and the boiling of water as health safeguards.

Non-existent roads, language barriers, and cultural differences are some of the problems Stan encounters almost daily. In order to do this work more effectively, Stan has applied for, and received a 12-month Traineeship from the Public Health Service. It is effective in February, 1959, at which time he will enroll at the University of California in Berkley. In August Stan received his M.A. degree in Education from New Mexico Highlands University in Las Vegas, New Mexico.

Warm good wishes to her classmates were sent by Frances Irene Sykes in a note addressed to the Alumni Office. Due to ill health, Frances has not been able to attend the Alumni activities. Her new address is: 207 South Duane Ave., Endicott, N. Y.

Miss Eva L. Keller retired as art supervisor in the Williamsport School District after 18 years of tireless devotion to her work. She will be missed by her students who were under her direction in art work. Presentation of the "Woman of the Year" award was made to Eva at the May meeting of the American Association of University Women at the Woman's Club, Williamsport.

1911

Miss Martha Slate entertained the Alumni Association officers and executive board at her cottage, Nip-Pen-Nucci near Antes Fort, Pa., for their July meeting. Families of these alumni members also attended and a tureen dinner was served.

1898

In early September one of our older alumni paid a visit to the Alumni Office. The Rev. Mr. A. N. Graeff, who is 83, was taking a trip through this area and wanted to take a look at the recent campus changes. Dr. Graeff was particularly impressed with the new Student Activities Building and stated that he wanted to come back next summer when it was completed. He also mentioned that he still corresponds with Willis Hartsock, a classmate, and Robert Allen '97.
